Roland FFA, agricultural education program welcome student teacher

ROLAND, Okla. – The Roland FFA chapter and agricultural education program recently welcomed student teacher Michael Dyer, an agricultural education senior from Oklahoma State University.

The student teaching program will allow Dyer to bridge the gap between teaching theory and practice. During his 12-week student teaching experience, Dyer will teach classes, be involved with FFA activities, and assist with supervised agricultural education experiences under the guidance of cooperating teacher M.L Lockwood. Dyer said he is looking forward to the experience.

“I’ve admired the Roland FFA chapter and Mr. Lockwood for several years and am impressed by the quality of activities and students in the program,” Dyer said. “I’m excited about the opportunity to student teach at a premier program in Oklahoma.”

At OSU, Dyer has been active in Collegiate FFA, the Native American Society, Oklahoma Agricultural Leadership Encounter and has been a member of the Dean’s Honor Roll.

“I look forward to meeting and getting to know the students and the people within the community,” Dyer said. “It’s going to be a great learning experience.
Upon completion of the student teaching experience, Dyer will return to Oklahoma State University in Stillwater where he will earn a Bachelor of Science Degree in Agriculture with a major in agricultural education.
